Church's fisherman sandals

church-footwear.com

Standard-setting Northampton shoemaker Church's makes all kinds of footwear: boots and brogues, oxfords and monk straps, slippers and loafers and even trainers. But it has never, in more than 145 years of quality cobbling, made a sandal. Until now. Cut from supple brown Nevada calf leather and featuring a leather sole and single silver buckle, Church's pleasingly Bohemian fisherman sandals turn out to be well worth the century-and-a-half wait. They're sleek and straightforward, and incredibly comfortable. Now all you need is a Mediterranean villa with a private beach, a glass of rosé and a pair of tanned ankles.

"accents should be practiced as if you're drunk"

Sam Rockwell in "Three Billboards Outside Ebbing, Missouri"

I always joke that Jason Dixon, the character I play in Three Billboards, is Barney Fife meets Travis Bickle. I spent a lot of time trying to perfect his southern Missouri accent. I did ride-alongs with a cop down there—he had a great twang. Accents should be practiced as if you're drunk. Actors get a little tense when they have to do an accent. Drunkenness relaxes everything.
