"...I have a whole new sense of things like childcare, or the level of postpartum care in this country, and parental leave. All of these things seem newly urgent to me. And newly enraging that they've been shunted off to the side. And it's made me feel, strangely, much more pro-choice than I ever did, and I already was pretty far to the left on that issue. But I've felt how much it's an issue for all people."

WAR PAINT

How your favourite products got political, by Nicola Moulton. Photograph: Angelo Pennetta. Fashion editor: Poppy Kain

There's nothing new in the idea that your choice of beauty product speaks volumes about you. But while your go-to brand might once have revealed something about your love of luxury/willingness to experiment/level of anti-ageing anxiety, these days, that pot of face cream – or tube of lipstick, or bottle of perfume – could be signifying something else: how fired up you are politically.

Because right now, campaigning for positive change – political, social, environmental – is >

GABRIELLE RICHARDSON

Artist, curator and co-founder of Art Hoe Collective, New York

Gabrielle has been making waves in the US art scene since 2015. 'We were young artists of colour speaking our minds and showcasing our work on Tumblr,' the 23-year-old says of Art Hoe, the collective she helped start that has been praised by the likes of Willow Smith and Amandla Stenberg. 'We saw ourselves in each other. It was painful to be a queer black artist and not feel like your work was being represented, so we formed this awesome online and offline platform for queer people of colour to showcase their artwork.' Her love for art has infiltrated her wardrobe. 'Style is like any form of creative expression,' she says. 'It's an outlet for you to make a statement through your clothing. I always wear my "Feminist" chain by my friend Mayan [Toledano]'s brand Me and You. Clothing is part of my identity. It's who I am.' ▶

FENN O'MEALLY

Director, London

'I've always loved the idea of presenting,' says 25-year-old Fenn. 'We grew up with Reggie Yates, Fearne Cotton and Angellica Bell talking to us. I made my own YouTube channel, and I quickly learned that I loved interviewing people and finding out their stories. You can learn so much through conversation.' A passion for storytelling led to Fenn adding 'filmmaker' to her CV: after teaching herself how to shoot and edit her own short films, she's worked with Paul Smith, and she shot the behind-the-scenes video for Stormzy's February ELLE cover shoot. As for style, the multi-hyphenate credits her mum as her biggest influence. 'When I was little, she used to put me in patent crocodile boots, dalmatian prints and frilly polka-dot halternecks... I loved it! As I got older I'd buy staples and combine them with whatever I could find in her wardrobe.' ▷

RINA SAWAYAMA

Singer-songwriter, London

*Japanese-British singer Rina, 28, has been garnering attention in music and fashion with her bold pop music and eclectic style. 'My interest in fashion started with Madonna and Lady Gaga,' she says. 'I love it when music is confessional and ridiculous – it's what I love about fashion, too. I identify with the queer culture that connects them.' She released mini-album Rina in 2017, which looked at the internet and its effects on young people's mental health. The University of Cambridge alumnus is now working on her debut record, turning her attention to lineage, ethnicity and identity. 'The most important thing is to write an album I'm deeply proud of,' she says. 'One that I can really heal from, and help heal others with, too.'* ▸

TAMU McPHERSON

Photographer and blogger, Milan

*Born in Jamaica, before living in New York and eventually settling in Milan, Tamu, 42, knows a thing or two about change. The former lawyer has built an illustrious career as a street-style photographer and magazine editor, and she runs her own website, All The Pretty Birds. Tamu is as likely to talk US politics as she is AW19 shows or her vibrant style: 'I communicate what I'm feeling,' she explains. 'At the end of the day, you're looking for an audience you can communicate with consistently, so if you're trying to be something else, it's not going to work out.'*

프라다의 프라다 마르케트 가죽 백

2019 레프트 컬렉션에서 처음 선보인 통돌이 형태의 풀 앰플 백인 프라다 마르케트(Market)를 2019 시즌을 맞아 크로코다일과 라제(Lizard) 패턴 등 한층 업그레이드된 버전으로 새롭게 출시했다. 백의 안쪽에 니트 가죽을 사용해 고급스러운 느낌을 강조했다. 탈착 가능한 재킷 스트랩이 있어 그날그날 목에 달아 두도 혹은 크로스보 스트랩만으로 변신이 가능하다. 그중에서도 화이트 소가죽 소재에 백 전체에 골드 스티드가 촘촘하게 장식되어 밝은 느낌을 주는 이 백은 오직 갤러리아명품관 WEST 1층 프라다 매장에서만 만날 수 있다. @백만만대
