Nos adentramos en la psique del genial (y atormentado) diseñador británico 10 años después de su muerte.

999.9 feelsun のサングラス

移動が多く時間をもたないの、自然と早歩きに。だから、夏場は特に歩いているとサングラスがスれるのが悩みでした。それを解消してくれたのが、これ。ノーズパッドのサイズを自分仕様に変え、さらに掛け心地を向上させました。動いてもスレず、少しぐらい難に扱っても全然OK。ゴルフでも活躍中です。

CHURCH'S のローファー

クラシックな着こなしは足元にも正統派を求めます。チャーチの靴は何足か持っていますが、ローファーはやはり使い勝手がいいんです。元来、カジュアルとされているデザインですが、端正な顔つきでスーツやジャケパンとも相性よし。ラバーソールの新作はまだ持っていませんが、歩きやすそうで出張にも重宝しそうです。

Find your fashion groove Staples that stand the test of time

Getting dressed needn't be stressful or involve many decisions (unless you like to get creative). Owning a handful of nice things that will last for years means that you can find your look and stick with it. Let's start from the feet and work up. Solid shoes are essential – not big ugly trainers but black or brown lace-ups with a sturdy base; think Church's (pictured) or French masters Paraboot. For comfy socks, the sort that you can pad about the house in, turn to Germany's Falke or Japan's Rototo. Best of all: a coat. It should be big and enveloping, ending up somewhere around the knees, with sleeves that cover up to half your hands. Navy is safest. Mackintosh, Acne Studios, A Kind of Guise or Italian maestro Valstar are best.

'Why Look at Animals?' Because they're looking at you

The late art critic, broadcaster and polymath John Berger's finest essay looks into the eyes of other species and finds sentience and reflection. Berger shrugged off the art-world rat race and moved to the remote French countryside, where he found the bond between man and beast unbroken in traditional agriculture and the peasant life. We don't all need to go fully pastoral to savour the gently philosophical; as with his treatises on art, Berger encourages looking and taking time to see. This Penguin edition might well be a book to put in that warm pocket of yours as you stroll off on a field trip to the countryside.

Joseph Quinn

At 25, London-born Quinn has already achieved what most actors only dream of: working alongside great British doyennes of Hollywood. 'I did a play with Olivia Colman at the National, which was a pinch-yourself moment,' he says. 'She is to die for, frankly. It's nauseating how nice she is. There is no artifice there. She has the time of day for everyone and we still text.'

Then he played Helen Mirren's son in Catherine the Great for Sky and HBO. 'It was extraordinary forging a relationship with her,' he reveals. 'She doesn't take herself too seriously and has a fierce sense of humour. It's no wonder she is held in such high acclaim. She's Helen Mirren.'

It was almost inevitable Quinn would fall into acting – his mother was a producer, his father a director turned drama teacher and his stepfather a cinematographer. 'It meant going on set wasn't alien to me,' he says. 'But it hasn't meant they could get me a job, unfortunately.' He's not short of gigs, though. Next up is a starring role in the latest adaptation of JK Rowling's Cormoran Strike novels for the BBC. And Joe's in no rush to jet to LA: 'I'm not going to gatecrash the party. If I'm invited to go, I'll go. I just want to keep working and do good things.' ▷

Boots stringati Docklow in canvas con profili a contrasto e soles carrarmato, Church's.

2 Cosa portare ai piedi nel tempo libero? Tralasciando l'overdose di sneakers più o meno sportive che ha invaso il mercato, optiamo per un paio di boots. Oltre all'intramontabile Beatle, abbiamo assistito ultimamente alla nobilitazione degli hiking boots e a picchi di dandysmo più o meno sensati, ma la nostra scelta cade su una proposta del brand britannico Church's. Il nuovo Docklow, ispirato ai boots che il marchio forniva alla Royal Army nelle calde colonie dell'impero britannico, è realizzato in cotone con soles in carrarmato. Un nostalgico richiamo agli anfibi da abbinare a jeans come a chinos e a pantaloni morbidi in lino. Se volessimo puntare alla performance durante le gite, la costruzione Goodyear delle soles, con aggiuntivi strati in gomma, li rende assolutamente versatili.
