OUT WITH THE NEW

Miu Miu's Upcycled collection returns this season with a capsule of chic leather jackets, each with their own unique story

From Maison Margiela to Prada and Coach, over the last few years we've seen an increasing number of designers give old pieces a second life through exclusive capsule collections. Miu Miu, however, has been leading the pack for a while now with its one-of-a-kind Upcycled collections, and this season it's back with a whole new project from the mind of Miuccia Prada.

Featuring a series of limited-edition leather jackets from the AW22 show, the brand sourced just 50 jackets from vintage markets across the world, reworking and refashioning them in the atelier by hand. Drawing on the inherently male connotations of the leather jacket, the wardrobe staple has been given a feminine twist with twenties-inspired collars in contrasting materials, stylised flowers, precious crystals, python-print leather and satin ribbon trim. Quite frankly, we want them all.

With the Upcycled collections going strong since 2020 — the House kicked them off with a selection of 80 vintage dresses and we've since seen a partnership with Levi's before this line of incredibly cool jackets — we can't wait to see what Miuccia comes up with next.

Miu Miu's latest jewellery line hits the sweet spot

Pills and thrills

Playful design codes abound in the latest collaboration between Miu Miu and artists Nathalie Djurberg and Hans Berg, who have drawn on their 2015 sculpture series, A Thief Caught in the Act, for a new collection of whimsical adornments. The duo have reimagined the mischievous motifs from their previous work to create a jewellery collection titled 'A Remedy', which casts resin pills and animals in sweet sorbet shades; in the artists' hands, the flamboyantly-drawn silhouettes of earrings and necklaces are translated into childlike forms. The resulting offbeat pieces offer a new look to traditional fine jewellery, imbuing animals and flowers with an impish impression when juxtaposed against a rainbow of boldly coloured pills. Polished, assembled and decorated by hand, their gleaming outlines make for a chic bridge between the art and jewellery worlds. miumi.com
