SPOTLIGHT

If THE SHOE fits

Forever a step ahead, CHLOË SEVIGNY slips into MIU MIU and CHURCH'S latest collaboration.

By LIAM HESS.

Photograph by STEFAN RUIZ. Styling by MAX ORTEGA

"They feel light as air," she says, slipping her foot into the shoe with the assistance of a shoehorn. "Whenever I find other brogue enthusiasts, they're always talking about Church's, so [it's] is an exciting day for me." This craftsmanship, prized by Sevigny's fellow enthusiasts, is present and correct, of course, but it's the quirkier details – moulded rubber soles and an embossed logo, for example – that speak to Miu Miu's involvement. "Classic with a twist," she says, as she turns her ankles from side to side to appraise how they look. "I want to run down the street and jump!"

For Sevigny, the appeal of Miu Miu also runs a little deeper. As the latest chapter in the brand's recent hot streak, Miuccia Prada's whimsical vision of a "frazzled Englishwoman" – from frizzy fringes and tweeds to (perhaps most shocking of all) athleisure-adjacent hoodies and leggings – has already provided several viral sensations. "To me, it was all classic Miu Miu," Sevigny says. "She's always done the underwear-showing, all the way back to when I walked for her – it's actually very timeless."

Sevigny would know: her first runway show with the brand was in New York in 1995, two years after the label had launched and soon after the release of Harmony Korine's Kids, which catapulted Sevigny to a certain kind of underground fame. "Miuccia has always embraced and championed young actresses, especially those of us making more controversial choices," she says. "I don't want to say it validates you, but it's nice to have someone in fashion not just dressing you, but really celebrating you." The feeling is clearly mutual. Not only has Sevigny starred in campaigns for the label many times since, but she also returned to walk for them in 2018; the year before, she directed >

It's a baking hot summer's evening in Connecticut, and Chloë Sevigny is preparing to try on a shoe. She's spending the week with her parents and three-year-old son while her husband, gallerist Siniša Mačković, travels to an art fair. "I thought it would be more fun than single-parenting in the city for a week," the 48-year-old says, sat in her brother's old bedroom, where she's illuminated by the glow of her iPhone screen over FaceTime.

From a powder-pink box, with all the ceremony of a white-gloved art handler appraising a masterpiece, Sevigny lifts a pair of shiny brogues, the product of a new collaboration between Miu Miu and British shoemaker Church's. Available as either a lace-up or a monk strap, in black or – as per the pair in Sevigny's hands – tobacco-glossed brushed leather, the shoes were first spotted on the runway of Miu Miu's autumn/winter 2023 collection.
